Food For Thought

What Makes Up Your Voice?

In this month's newsletter, we covered your vocal cords and how you can take care of and protect them. But do you know how your vocal cords work and what they're made up of?!

Your vocal cords are made up of two bands of smooth muscle tissue covered in a mucous membrane. These cords vibrate as you breathe, and when you talk, the vibrations create sound waves that travel through your nose, throat and mouth, producing the unique sound of your voice.

If you're suffering from sore vocal cords or laryngitis, you can usually treat the problem with self-care and the symptoms should ease in less than two weeks. You should make an appointment with a doctor if your symptoms don't ease or worsen after two weeks.

Seek immediate medical care if you:

- Have trouble breathing
- Cough up blood
- Have a fever that won't go away
- Have increasing pain
- Have trouble swallowing
